It is said that Ressel, who died in poverty and neglect in 1857, described his plan for using the Archimedean screw for the propulsion of ships as long are as the Warm People Not to Judge Her State by the Horrors of the Kanens Building.

Everyone seems to have his or her own individual way of doing the fair, some preferring guide books, rolling chairs with or without gray-coated guides, maps and catalogues galors, while others are satisfied with themwhile others are satisfied with them-selves as electones. Personally, there is nothing so distracting as guide books. No sconer do you get baggage in place and self adjusted for the jour-ncy to Chicago than your seat is in-vaded by all sorts of pamphiets relative to a sojourn at the fair. As these books show there are many men books show there are many men of many minds, therefore the printed information available you nothing but variation of spirit. Don't purchase your information. Get it gratis from your acquaintances who have previously learned by experiences, and and otherwise. They can tell you, far better than the most cleverly written advertisement, how to make a dollar do a from the woe-begune and eye-wearied countenances the woman visitor is taking her pleasure andly. Her pockethook holds as a rule funds for a fortulative stay—her heart holds longings that would cover a monta. She has a horror of returning home without having seen everything her neighber has and more, too; so all day long she travels from one building to another, formatting to rest, until day long she travels from one building to another, forgetting to reat, until she becomes not only physically exhausted, but the mind, weary of its affort to receive every impression, at last succumbs. The disposition has soured to the sorrow of those who must mingle with them, and as the crowd gathers on the pintforms to take the elevated trains for town, the brutality exhibited defice description. Women are crushed and smothered in their frantic efforts to reach the entries, and gallautry has no advocates in the collapsed masculines who are likewise struggling to eatch the first train out. But what else can the woman of to-day expect from man, since she is trying to prove that his inheritance to the right to protect and provide for her is not valid?

If you are interested in suffrage, equal rights and the emancipation of women, the best place to pursue the study in detail is at the Kansas building, a structure that slaughters the pride of every true-born Kansan. We might resign ourselves to the caprice of the architect were it not filled with parodies on the state. There are women of the femining architect is found. en of the feminine gender in Kausas, and they, as well as their sisters of other states, overwhelmed with morti-fication and wrath on beholding that monatrosity of wrath that pictures Frances Willard surrounded by a con-vict, Innatic, slave and an klict, stood before it with suppressed rage. Let me say for us who are spart from those who are craving emancipation that women in Kansas are not considered to be on an equal plane with the stricken humanity in which Frances Willard is ineffaibly planted, and never will be, and further, that the subject is the offspring of a depraved and contemptible mind. If such aspersions are the outgrowth of woman's cause you will think, if your from morning till night for twenty-five cents. Those in charge are bright-faced, healthy-lobking nurses from the training schools, and they care for the wee ones with much evident tenderness. They make a very pretty sight in their simple gray uniform, and all capped in white. As they pass from one baby to the other, fendling this one and pacifying mother, while others are journeying in the land of Nod, there is a satisfied feeling that woman has not forgotten her mission-and never will , no matter how much the manly woman barangues her colcagues and the curios in the lecture

One day while looking through the glass partition, designed especially for the purpose of instructing the people in the latest improved methods for rearing infants. I noticed a woman frantically gestionisting, evidently terror stricken over a portending enlamity, when a nurse led her from one daintily canopied stadie to anoth-er until at one she stopped alruptly.

and then stopped long enough to say something, which the on-lonkers regarded as explanatory. Then the nurse and mother with her was one soon disappeared through a door. I learned that the cause of this commotion was that the check the mother had persived on entering the haby she had but, and consequently entertained fours that her little one would not be given to her on application. The in-geneity of one women who was seeing the west-fers with seven little children received the praise of all those who caught a gittere of her. The cident of them all was between cleves and teraine years, while the youngest was a not probably of four. Around the waint of rack could was a leather but that had fastened to it at the back a metal ring. Through this ring ran a engin harmseling all the children together and terminating at a similar ring on a branchet mereraly factored on the mother's wrist. That they were a novel sight needs no questioning, and the amusement and approval that shome on the people's faces as she and her flock passed by were evidence enough that the acheme had taken.

"For that thred feeling" with which you are seized after an eight hour tramp, take a stroll in Midway Platsance and there lose yourself in contemplating the comedy of existence and not the wickedness with which it is said the Plaisance is teeming. There is so much that is instructive and diverting that one's mind need not from A Lady's Watch is About the Size is so much that is instructive and diverting that one's mind need not from necessity dwell upon its vulgarities—if such exist. Here you may brush up against every nation under the sun, and judging from the business-like way with which some of these very foreign foreigners deport themselves they have been in the show business before. They seem to regard the average American as a most guilible person, and offer him goods with an impudent insinuating assurance that the coins in his pockets are to be had for the asking, and if you surprise a vender by pockets are to be had for the asking, and if you surprise a vender by declining to purchase of his gaudy trifles his remarks are not always the most delicate. The various curious looking sweetments that they sell find some purchasers, but they always nibhle them suspiciously, feeling all the while that they are challenging Providence. "Tes, maced. Sugary pretty giri is Nellie. I guess some of them were saying to themselves: "There's a lucky dog." What do you think they really

The only person I saw eating pea-nuts was John Jacob Astor, who was strelling through the Midway by the side of his wife, who was seeing the sights from a rolling chair. Undoubt-edly he could not withstand the persnasive voice of an enterprising young-ster who advertised "double-jointed hunehback peanuts five cents a lag."
There were plenty of that wonderful variety of "gabers" exhibited in the California building, the only state in the union that can produce that particular kind.

The popularity of the street of Cairo has led the owners thereof to raise the price of admission from ten to fifteen cents. It is said to be a correct representation of an Egyptian thoroughfare. Camel riding is the chief attraction, and there are a few people who do not object to making ludicrous exhibitions of themselves by taking a sail on "the ship of the desert." Along these so-called "streets" the Egyptian flower girl, or what we are told is one, offers for sale odorous flowers from the nearest greenhouse. If in the dirty, slov-enly, begrimed creature you can find a remnant of those visions of veiled loveliness which the romancer delighted in, your imagination will be the source of a great fortune. The "villages" are entertaining, and I believe the only theater that has not been advertised as vulgar is the quaint childlike performance that takes place in the Japanese inclosure. The building is constructed of bamboo and will seat one thousand people. There is not enough material in their dramas to draw vast audiences, and the mind of the American soon wearies of the pantomime and is ready to leave long before the culminating scene, though if patient he will be rewarded at the close by a solo, usually one of our na-tional airs, played on the only stringed instrument in their orchestra, which is composed entirely of wonderful-toned goags and bells. There must be an advocate of the Darwinian theory con-nected with the management of the village, for a fine large ape has a con-spicuous place allotted to him, where he is not at all backward in displaying resembles man, and he displays no tact in thrusting the unpleasant knowledge upon you.

The German village is nothing more than a great beer garden, and the one feature is the magnificent brass band that plays the music that the children of the Fatherland love. The music, along with the beer, is apt to make them a trifle enthusiastic, but there is nothing unpleasant about it.

"Old Vienna" is the resort of the so ciety people, and here on Saturday evenings they have decreed it to be the fashion to dine. Therefore be tween six and seven they come in their splendor to make a dinner of beer, vienerwurst, sauerkraut and Dutch fried potatoes. There is nothing elegant about such a dinner, but the price. Everybody drinks beer, even Kansas people, and if you are not familiar with the price-lists you may be asked a dollar for two small bottles of imported beer. While speaking of drinks it might be kindness to warn the one who is going to the fair not to take the lemonade unless in need of an "Old Vienna" is filled with pretty barmaids, who only serve that part of humanity who appreciate better than the other part the witchery of dark eyes and tender smiles. The language of German love is being industriously pursued by some of our army officers stationed on the grounds, and who and the menu very palatable when served by German maids. After the lamps are lit in the garden and the quaint shops the picturesque place is at its best, and, if you are fatigued by a day of sightseeing the Austrian orchestra will make you forget the weariness of existing by rendering the weariness of existing by rendering the sweet old waltzes of Strauss and Waldtenffel and all the favorite German tunes. Just before the hour for closing a watchman arrayed in antique contume, carrying a lantern across his shoulder, patrols the village, crying: "All is well." ETHEL INCALLS.
